Instructed by Theresa McGuire, MSN, RN, NPD-BC

Theresa is a master's prepared board-certified nursing professional development specialist with more than 30 years of health care experience where she held diverse roles including direct care, leadership, quality, healthcare consulting, and staff development. She currently serves as the Director of Education at the second largest freestanding psychiatric mental health hospital. She is a certified Caritas Coach having studied under Dr. Jean Watson, a living nursing legend who developed a theoretical framework on caring science.

Theresa has extensive experience in education design and creating innovative professional development activities to close the knowledge, skill, practice gap. She has presented to a diversity of audiences on the local, state, national, and international audiences on a wide range of topics, including presenting posters and podium presentations at ANPD and the Magnet Conference. Her passions include celebrating the unique talents of all nurses, coaching them to grow and develop their professional nursing practice, and improving the quality of patient care. As a healthcare consultant, she has helped many organizations achieve the esteemed ANCC Magnet designation. As a professional development practitioner, she has planned, implemented, and evaluated a homegrown, "seamless to transition" practice program that yielded excellent New Graduate RN satisfaction scores, very high retention rates, and improved patient outcomes.
